

ROCKEFELLER MUST TESTIFY IN NEW HAVEN CASE

Examiner Reports He Is Well Enough to Take Stand at Inquiry.

DOCTORS DISREGARDED

Morton F. Plant Will Also Be Forced to Testify at Hearing in Washington.

(Special to The Evening World.) WASHINGTON, June 2.—William Rockefeller must appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission and testify in the New Haven railroad investigation. Examiner McAdam has reported to counsel Folk that Mr. Rockefeller is physically able to testify.

Mr. Folk said to-day that the standard of the inquiry will be among the early witnesses when the inquiry commences. When the Interstate Commerce Commission sought Mr. Rockefeller's testimony in the New Haven affair they were met by the same reports of illness. Mr. Rockefeller first avoided subpoenas, however, and kept out of the way of process servers. Finally he was served at his favorite winter resort, Jekyll Island.

Then doctors' certificates were produced to the commission declaring that the millionaire was too ill to go to Washington. A few days later, it was discovered, that Mr. Rockefeller was able to attend a meeting of New Haven railroad directors in New York City, and also to be present at social functions in Connecticut country houses.

These facts caused the Interstate Commerce Commission to make an investigation of its own into the state of Mr. Rockefeller's health. Examiner McAdam, who is in New York City looking into the books of J. P. Morgan & Co., the New Haven railroad investigation, was directed to go personally to the hospital to see the doctors' certificates that have been long kept by Mr. Rockefeller off the witness stand.

Mr. Rockefeller was refusing the subpoenas of New Haven directors he said. Mr. Rockefeller was afflicted with throat trouble, probably cancer, which interfered with speech, but he was able to attend business meetings and would speak in hushed whispers.

The complaint was made as the result of the work of a woman employed by Commissioner of Correction Catherine B. Davis. Dr. Baxter had a marked five-dollar bill in his pockets when arrested.

HOE WAS A FOOL, SAYS HIS LAWYER IN PLEA TO JURY

Miss Sullivan, Recalled, Denies Stories Told by Former Chum and Defendant.

JURY GETS THE CASE.

Lawyers Finish Summing Up and Verdict Will Probably Be Rendered To-Night.

Miss Mae A. Sullivan's $325,000 breach of promise suit against Arthur Fingersoll Hoe, the millionaire, went to the jury late to-day. Justice Gavan charged the jury after Attorney Mitrabeau L. Towne, for Miss Sullivan, and Attorney Hamilton had summed up.

Miss Sullivan was called to the stand for only a few minutes to rebut the testimony given against her by Mrs. Dorothy Campion, her former chum. Miss Sullivan answered a few questions with a smile, until she denied the evidence offered by Mrs. Campion. Then her face reddened with anger and she shouted her replies.

"I never walked on Broadway at night in my life—I swear that on my life," Miss Sullivan said with emphasis. "Mrs. Campion lied, and she knows she did," the excited witness continued. "We did not meet Mr. Hoe on Twenty-third street and Second avenue, as Mr. Hoe and Mrs. Campion said. I met him at Fifty-third street and Fifth avenue."

"IT'S A PACK OF LIES!" CRIES THE PLAINTIFF.

"It's a pack of lies," the witness cried.

"Did Mr. Hoe ring you up on the telephone since this action was begun?" asked Mr. Towne.

"I rang him up in June, after coming back from Atlantic City," the witness replied, "and he wouldn't talk to me."

"Did Mr. Hoe tell you anything about where you should go when you came back from Atlantic City?" asked Mr. Towne.

"He told me he was financially embarrassed and that he knew a house where I could make thousands of dollars," the witness answered. "Then I told him I would tell my uncle and he begged and pleaded with me not to. He gave me $500."

AUNT OF GIRL TELLS OF HER CHILDHOOD.

Mrs. John J. Sullivan, the plaintiff's aunt, who has been sitting in the court since Monday with her niece, took the stand and denied the assertion made by Mrs. Campion that Mrs. Sullivan had told her to "put Mae on the street."

"I loved Mae and looked after her and tried to do my best for her until this happened to her," said Mrs. Sullivan. However, the witness admitted that Mrs. Campion called on her in Hewes street, Brooklyn. Mrs. Sullivan admitted that she had not seen her niece in five years.

Mrs. Sullivan told of her niece's early life in a convent and of her schooling after that.

Mrs. Henry Russell McDonald of No. 106 Northern avenue, a girlhood chum of Miss Sullivan, told of visiting the latter in her $800 a week apartment at No. 420 Riverside Drive in November, 1912.

"What did she show you?" asked Attorney Hamilton for Hoe.

"She showed me her trousseau and said she was going to marry William A. Burr," said Mrs. McDonald.

"Did she say anything else to you?" asked the lawyer.

TOLD WITNESS SHE WAS IN LOVE WITH BURR.

"She told me that she was very much in love with Burr, and showed me a princess engagement ring which she said Burr had given her," said Mrs. McDonald.

Under cross-examination Mrs. McDonald said that she was separated from her husband, a moving picture actor. Mr. Towne pressed her for an explanation as to how she had come into the case, and with much feeling and a show of anger the witness said:

"I read in the newspapers on Saturday of this trip to Albany on which Miss Sullivan went and my husband was along. I was a drunken party and I just wanted to know what right Miss Sullivan had to go and take my husband along on such a party."

The taking of testimony was completed at noon and after a short recess William H. Hamilton began summing up for Hoe.

In a voice which could be heard on the steps of the City Hall, directly across from the open windows of Justice Gavan's courtroom in the County Courthouse, Mr. Hamilton referred to Hoe as a "fool."

NEVER PROPOSE IN PRESENCE OF THIRD PARTY.

"A fool he may have been," said the lawyer, "but it is human to err and when Mr. Hoe foolishly erred he was no less human than you are."

"Gentlemen," he continued, "you go all down the long lane of litigation; you can remember any wild dreams of yours; you can resort to your imaginations or stories in the Bible, and you cannot find one instance of a man proposing to his sweetheart in the presence of a third person." This referred to the testimony of Miss Sullivan, who said Hoe proposed to her in the presence of Mrs. Dorothy Campion. Mrs. Campion denied this.

"This defendant, Hoe," shouted Mr. Towne in his speech, "is the most salacious wolf that ever stalked two maidens on the public streets of New York. He is a seething cauldron of vicious humanity."

PEACE OR WAR FOR MEXICO IN NEXT 48 HOURS

President Says Carranza's Envoys Must Be Heard by Mediators at Once.

RECOGNITION THREAT.

Will Hold Vera Cruz Until Reforms He Demands Are Granted.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—A crisis in the efforts of the A B C mediators to bring about internal peace in Mexico and to end the "war" between Mexico and the United States must be reached within forty-eight hours.

President Wilson to-day is reported unalterably determined on the stand that the mediators must recognize the Constitutionalists and must receive representatives from Carranza before any peace plans can be worked out.

Carranza's declaration that he will enter into no negotiations which prevent him from becoming Provisional President of Mexico, pending a general election, is another stumbling block in the path of peace.

President Wilson is said to have reached the conclusion that unless some definite step is reached within forty-eight hours he may recognize the belligerency of the Carranza party and thus force matters to an issue.

In that event he would continue to occupy Vera Cruz until Carranza has ousted Huerta and until the government Carranza forms has agreed to put into effect the reforms the United States demands.

The four most important developments in the situation are:

First—Huerta's refusal to accept the proposed plan for a temporary commission government in Mexico and his counter proposal that he continue in office, and that President, Vice-President, Congress and State Governors be chosen at a general election on July 5.

Second—Carranza's assumption of the title of Provisional President of Mexico and his refusal to participate in the mediation programme on any other basis than that of Provisional President, himself to supervise the subsequent general election.

Third—President Wilson's insistence that the Constitutionalists be invited to participate in the mediation conferences, regardless of whether they agree to an armistice with Huerta.

Fourth—The refusal of the mediators to deal with the Constitutionalists on any other terms than an agreement to an armistice.

Rafael Zubaran, head of the Carranza agency here, commented to-day upon Mexico City dispatches representing Gen. Huerta as desiring that the Constitutionalists enter the mediation proceedings so that Mexico's affairs might be settled by Mexicans.

"The Constitutionalists have nothing to mediate with Huerta," said he, "and can only meet him at the point of the sword."

CREW DESERTED LIFEBOATS OF EMPRESS, SO WOMAN SAYS

ly. I thought we should go down, and I was just thinking I would stay on the bridge until we did. 'LET US GO DOWN TOGETHER,' SHE SAID.

"I said to my husband, 'Are we going down?' and he said, 'I think so.' I said, 'Take it easy, dear; don't say a word to anybody.' I did not think that was the time to scold or blame. I could not cry. I thought my place was right there, and I told my husband, 'Let us go down together.'"

"And just in a minute that liner was running away, so fast. O said to my husband, 'How can that be? She must be all right; she is running away.' My husband had given orders to keep our ship at the same place; not to get out of the hole. If that other liner had not gone full speed we could have been left together, and it would have been better. I said to my husband, 'What will you do?' He said, 'Try to make her in the same place,' but in a minute the liner was running away, and everything was quiet and dark.

"I turned to the chief engineer, who was on the bridge, and said, 'How can that be? She is going away from us without asking if we want help. She must be all right.'"

"Yes, it is funny," my husband said, and I was still wondering and asking if we were going down. The first mate and some of the crew went forward to see if the water was coming in. We thought the liner was all right, and I said, 'It is funny that liner has not come to help us.'"

HEARD THE FIRST CRIES FROM THE WATER.

"Five minutes after, I was the first to hear the cries, and to my husband I said, 'They are calling,' and the cries seemed to come from the shore. My husband gave the order to lower the boats. We could not see the steamer, as all her lights had gone out. But we kept in the direction of the cries, and we were not more than this ship's length away from her all the time. When I heard the cries I was nearly mad; I wanted to jump overboard, it was so terrible. I put my hands to my face and walked away, but no one saw me.

"It was not ten minutes before every lifeboat was out of our ship with our crew in them. From that time I did not have time to worry. I had to make everything ready for the passengers who were being saved. I have just two blouses and two dresses left now, and no petticoats.

"The passengers had only on their night dresses, and they were cold and shivering. I ripped off the clothes of the women and wrapped them in warm blankets.

"And then the second engineer brought two other ladies; and one was nearly mad. She had been under one of the lifeboats and was nearly drowned. The second mate was just returning with his boat full of people when he heard her cry faintly. The boat was full, but he turned back and took her in. She was nearly dead, and I spent ten minutes rubbing her and gave her whiskey and hot coffee and a night dress and my fur coat. And then I had to look after somebody else, and I asked two gentlemen to come in and rub her feet, and soon she was all right.

CAPT. KENDALL NOT ILL WHEN TAKEN ABOARD.

"When Capt. Kendall was brought aboard he went to the chart room. He was not ill and was not given any brandy. The captain had whiskey, but did not have it on our boat. I can swear that the captain of the Empress was not out helping make rescues. He came on board while our boats were out and went to the chart room and told down. He said: 'When his boat came alongside it was not half full. He and his men scrambled on board and walked over the deck and injured. Our captain called to him not to hurry, and Capt. Kendall replied, 'Well, well, to the mate. The first mate came and shouted to him: You must not hurry to take that look at the dead bodies!' but he walked over them and a little later said: 'Why did I not drown?'"

"Two lifeboats in the Empress came alongside and in them were people of their own crew and officers. They rushed upon our ship and left empty boats behind them. Our captain told them to get out of their boats to help at the work of rescue. They replied: 'There is such a crowd there we cannot go. Some of our crew got into the boats and came back twice with full boats.'"
